

SMITH ATTACK SPLITS DEMOCRATS AS THEY GATHER FOR CONVENTION TO NAME PARTY'S NOMINEES

Party Leaders Hoping for Most Peaceful Convention in 20 Years Find Themselves in Midst of An Old-Fashioned Party Row—Attacks Made from Both Right and Left

By George R. Holmes

PHILADELPHIA, June 22—Under attack from left to right, the Democrats who poured into Philadelphia for what they had hoped would be the most peaceful convention in 20 years, suddenly found themselves today in the midst of an old-fashioned party row.

From the left the attack came from the new Union Party sponsored by Representative William Lemka, Republican of North Dakota, who has radical ideas concerning the money and currency system of the country.

From the right the attack came from none other than Alfred E. Smith, party standard bearer eight years ago, who along with four other Democrat "constitutionalists" appealed to the delegates to "put aside Franklin D. Roosevelt and substitute some genuine Democrat."

The leaders and the rank and file alike were stunned by the unexpected and savage Smith attack. They knew that Smith was going to cut the convention and disapprove of Roosevelt and Garner, but none of them dreamed that he would go to the lengths that he did.

So far as stopping the nomination of Roosevelt and Garner, the Smith blast was a dud. Roosevelt and Garner will be renominated by acclamation just as soon as the convention can get around to the business.

In the aftermath today, talk was all of what effect Smith's bolt will have in November. There were those who felt that his leaving the party might have considerable effect in New York and New England, where his followers always have been more numerous.

There are others who felt that the ex-governor had so effaced himself from the Democratic picture since his tie-up with the Liberty League that his going will amount only to a ripple. The Roosevelt people are not going to take the Smith statement lying down. An answer will be forthcoming probably from Senator Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky, in his keynote speech to-morrow night, and probably will be hammered on in Senator Joe Robinson's speech as permanent chairman, Wednesday night.

Amigos Club Holds Banquet at Valley Forge

EDDINGTON, June 22—The second "We-Treat" banquet of the Amigos Club, Presbyterian Church organization, was held Saturday evening in the Valley Forge Country Club Inn, Valley Forge. Thirty-six persons were present.

Elder Charles Drain, of the Olivet Covenant Presbyterian Church, was the speaker of the evening. He spoke on the topic, "How much do you weigh?"

According to Mr. Olivet, the Bible says that we are overweight but we can be overweight if we follow the advice given in a later section. He further said that God has given us vessels to help us keep "in trim" and they include: the Bible, prayer, the Church, and Jesus Christ.

The banquet, which is to become an annual affair, was especially appropriate as a part of the jubilee celebration of the Eddington Presbyterian Church.

TO STAGE FAIR EARLIER THAN IN OTHER YEARS

Doylestown Exhibition To Be Held Sept. 15 to 19, Inclusive

MANY FAVOR CHANGE

DOYLESTOWN, June 22—Complying with a wide-spread request that the Doylestown Fair be staged earlier than in previous years, officers and directors announced new 1936 dates for the fourteenth annual Doylestown Fair as September 15 to 19 inclusive.

This change in dates, without a doubt means a greater Doylestown Fair from every standpoint, and at the same time meets the demand of the patrons of this live-wire fair, who for a number of years have wanted an earlier fair.

The change in dates means that it has made it possible to book the finest entertainment feature on the stage today, directly through George A. Hamid, America's premier showman, and to have the Endy Show group return to Doylestown this year. It also means that some of the finest harness horses in the East will be seen in competition on the Doylestown track this year, for during that particular season, all of the best horses will be in this district.

The earlier fair dates, September 15 to 19, will also be more satisfactory to a great number of the old-time exhibitors, those who have helped to make and build the Doylestown Fair. Farmers, too, have expressed the opinion that the earlier dates are much better.

"It means just this," Dr. H. W. Turner, president of the Doylestown Fair Association, said, "that the 1936 fair will be by far the finest that has ever been staged in Bucks county. This is possible through the show that was booked through George A. Hamid personally. One of the features of the week to be staged on children's day will be the 'Lucky Taster' attraction that has been passed upon by all fair officers and showmen as the outstanding single attraction for 1936, the most sensational act ever staged."

Hamid was in Doylestown recently and completed all arrangements for the 1936 fair here and complimented the fair association in their wise move in selecting earlier dates which, the New York showman said, is sure to result in a much bigger fair.

Don't Indulge In Useless Horn Blowing

There are a number of motorists here who blow their horns when traffic is congested and it is impossible for the other cars to proceed. This useless horn blowing annoys the motorist ahead and makes him nervous and jittery. It might cause an accident, when traffic begins to move.

Exercise caution on the highway and remember "children are to be seen and not hurt."

A MODERN MARXIAN DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM

(New York American, June 19, 1936)

The quandary that the "Democratic" party will be in at Philadelphia on the concoction of a platform is pathetic enough to draw tears from the eyes of William Penn's statue, 545 feet above the ground.

Every delegate to that convention will remember the platform of 1932 with nervous gulps in his throat.

He will recall that ninety per cent of that platform was repudiated just as soon as the man who had promised to uphold EVERY PLANK in it was inaugurated.

In view of this stark repudiation of everything that was essentially Democratic in that platform and the substitution therefore of a program based on the theses of the Third International, we recommend that the "Democratic" Party can best save its face by the adoption of a declaration of principles along these lines:

The Democratic Party in convention assembled pledges its support to its incomparable leader, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, D. U. L.—Doctor of Unconstitutional Law.

It was our peerless leader who, when he took the reins of government, had the courage immediately to change Grover Cleveland's "a condition, not a theory, confronts us," into "A THEORY, NOT A CONDITION, CONFRONTS US."

Courageously applying a dozen theories to a menacing condition, he had the genius to irritate the condition from a national blister to a national boil.

He declared all Constitutional restraints to be part of the horse-and-buggy era antecedent to 1933 and substituted for a century and a half of experience the Pythian epigrams of Dr. Tugwell and the Marxian sentiments of Dr. Frankfurter.

We renew our faith in individual liberty—but only for those in office.

We affirm our belief in the doctrine of freedom—but only in the matter of spending Treasury cash on crack-brained boondoggling enterprises.

We stand unalterably opposed to any form of freedom that involves old-fashioned individualism, rugged or just normally American.

We pledge ourselves to continue "the emergency" as long as those tried-and-true spenders, Messrs. Hopkins, Ickes and Farley, desire.

We advocate an amendment to the Constitution abolishing the President's oath of office on the ground that such an oath is unwarranted interference with the President's liberty of action and an infringement on the right of our peerless leader to change our form of government as he wills.

We believe the Civil Service merit system should be abolished completely in the interests of the more abundant life for the "boys" and for the building up of a political bureaucracy.

We point with pride to the fact that under Franklin Delano Roosevelt mere competence has been pretty well rooted out of the service.

We advocate the reduction of Supreme Court Justices to the level of Cabinet officers—or even lower.

We denounce all "intrenched greed" except in its political forms.

We denounce the efforts of the opposition to declare "the emergency" at an end as unpatriotic because it would endanger the second termite program.

We are making no promises this year, as too many misguided persons take them seriously.

But we point with pride to the fact that there is no longer a forgotten man as far as taxation is concerned. Even the babies will soon be receiving income tax blanks from the Treasury Department.

The past three years of our stewardship is open to all. The future is a melon to be cut.

GOV. GIVES CONCESSION TO A PERSONAL FRIEND

Harold W. Swope To Run Restaurant at The Capitol

IS POLITICAL ALLY

HARRISBURG, June 22—In his fearful plea to his fellow citizens Governor Earle has repeatedly asserted: "No one shall go hungry in Pennsylvania."

As far as Democratic jobholders are concerned their appetites hereafter will be appeased under the auspices of his Excellency who has awarded the restaurant concession at the Capitol to a personal and political friend. The ousted lessee is a trained caterer but, unfortunately for him, he lacked New Deal qualifications for rounding up votes.

The new lessee is Harold W. Swope, son of Guy Swope, Budget Secretary to the Governor with a salary of $5000 per year. In addition to the dispensation of hamburgers, hot dogs and various kinds of sandwiches the elder Swope is politically potent as Chairman of the Dauphin County Democratic Committee and is also Democratic nominee for Congress in the 19th district, comprising Dauphin, Cumberland and Lebanon counties.

Of course Swope Sr. will be too busy hustling for votes for the Guffey-Earle-Lawrence combine to ladle out soups, pies, gingerbread, et al, to hungry Democrats, to personally preside at the restaurant. Son Harold will be in attendance but an expert chef, one A. F. Carr, familiar with preparing and serving meals will handle

LANDRETH'S SEEDS WIN AND LOSE GAMES

Victors Over Tacony A. C. by Score of 6 to 5

LOSE TO PENN. A. C. TEAM

Landreth's Seeds broke even in their week-end schedule, winning one and losing one. On Saturday they won over the Tacony nine by the score of 6 to 5 but yesterday the Farmers lost a tough game by the score of 7 to 4, being defeated by the Penn. A. C. Both games were played on the home grounds.

After a three weeks' lay-off due to a knee injury, "Vic" Rockhill returned to the Landreth's Seeds line-up on Saturday and supplied the necessary hit in the ninth to woe out the Tacony A. A., 6-5.

The "Farmers" had two big innings the seventh and the ninth in which they scored their runs. They inserted enough hits in these two innings to win any ordinary ball game.

The first run scored by the visitors was rather fluky. It came in the fifth on a drive by Hartman, a hit which got over Hines' dome for two bases, when he lost the ball in the sun. Ryan, who previously had reached first on balls, scored.

The Seeds went ahead in the seventh. Turner Ashby hit to left for two bases and stretched it to third when Cunningham allowed the ball to go through. Praul's hit scored him. Rockhill's hit to right and Malmbsbury's smash to deep left for three sacks brought across two more, before Pitko grounded to short to retire the side.

Tacony rallied in their ninth and

ELEVEN GRADUATE FROM ST. CHARLES' PAROCHIAL SCHOOL

Five Girls and Six Boys Complete Eighth Grade Course

GIVEN MANY AWARDS

Hubert J. Horan, 3rd, Given Bracken Post Award at Exercises

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, June 22—Five girls and six boys were graduated from the eighth grade of the St. Charles' Parochial School here yesterday and a number of awards and prizes given in a very impressive ceremony in which students from the lower grades participated.

Preceding the awarding of prizes several different groups of students rendered piano selections and songs. The opening chorus was a welcome to the audience and graduates. This was followed by "Beautiful Lady in Blue" which was sung by the smaller children.

Frank T. Gardner, Hubert J. Horan, 3rd, and J. Raymond Rhodes were awarded competitive scholarships to St. Joseph's High School. More than a thousand boys competed for the limited number of scholarships and the showing made by the St. Charles' School was exceedingly fine.

The American Legion Award for the boy most outstanding in the qualities of honor, courage, leadership, service and scholarship, was presented by Leslie Kilcoyne, Esq., of the Robert Bracken Post, to Hubert J. Horan, 3rd. Mr. Kilcoyne gave an inspiring address before the presentation in which he stressed the importance of courage and honor. The speaker also said that the kind of leadership that the American Legion desires is the type portrayed by Washington at Valley Forge. Strive to lend a helping hand and the idea of service is realized was a further point. Coming to the last point, scholarship, Mr. Kilcoyne said that without this quality all the others would be of no avail. Scholarship is the bottom structure or foundation of them all.

The girl's award was presented to Rita Wiley by Mrs. Dorothy Fechtenburg, of the Legion Auxiliaries of the Robert Bracken Post.

In his address before the awarding of the prizes the Rev. Father Rodgers complimented the school system as it is found in this country. "But," he said, "we too often have high ideals with very meagre results. This must be overcome."

The prizes awarded included: The Rev. Joseph F. Rodgers Prize for highest general average in the eighth grade was given to Frank T. Gardner. Edward J. Urban won the Rev. Francis J. Flood Prize for Christian Doctrine in the eighth grade. The Mrs. Seton Henry Prize for mathematics in the eighth grade was given to J. Raymond Rhodes.

The James Wiley English Prize was awarded to James B. McCloskey and the Mrs. Edward G. Harrison History Prize was given to Hubert J. Horan, 3rd, making him a triple honors winner. The Application Prize established by Hubert J. Horan was won by Helen M. Mortimer.

The graduates are: Frank T. Gardner, Edward J. Urban, J. Raymond Rhodes, James B. McCloskey, Hubert J. Horan, 3rd, and David Cameron. Rita Wiley, Helen Mortimer, Catharine Howlett, Dorothy Schack, Madeline Miltz.

Other prizes were: For the highest general average for the boy and girl in the seventh grade, to Anna Jarvis and Donald Gardner. The Edward McKee Prize to the boy and girl with the highest general average in the 6th grade was awarded to Helen Cannon and Thomas Ivers. The Frank J. Gardner Prize in the fifth grade was given to Juliana McKee and Robert White.

The prize to the boy and girl for the highest general average in the fourth grade was given to Joan McCloskey and John Horan. The third grade prize went to Elizabeth Curran and Alphonse Wisman, and the second grade prize was awarded to Kathleen Bills and Elisha Finan. The first grade prize went to Margaret Casey and John Dignan.

Certificates for perfect attendance were awarded to: Dorothy Schack, 8th grade; Anna Jarvis, 7th grade; Charles Cook and Helen Cannon, 6th grade; Raymond Moss and Margaret Cook, 5th grade; and Joseph Bauman, Joseph McIntyre, Norman Moss, and James Wiley, 4th grade.

MEAT FOR PHILATELISTS

Evidently this is to be a great year for philatelists. Still on the list for issue by the Postoffice Department in 1936 are stamps marking centennial observances in both Arkansas and Oregon and a series of ten army-navy issues. According to the present plan, the one-cent army and one-cent navy stamps will be placed on sale about August 1, with the remaining denominations, up to and including the five-cent issues, following in sequence the first of each succeeding month. The final two stamps of the series, the five-cent Military Academy and the five-cent Naval Academy issues, will be released December 1, concluding the series before the holidays.

The central design for the Arkansas centennial issue will incorporate a reproduction of the historic old state house with that of the present state capitol. In addition, there is to be an outline reproduction of the old Arkansas post, first settlement in the state. The color of this three-cent stamp will be light purple.

The Postoffice Department and the Bureau of Engraving and Printing are working on the first die proofs of the Oregon centennial commemorative stamp, which is to be placed on sale for the first time in the middle of August at the Walla Walla, Washington, and Lewiston, Idaho, postoffices incident to Oregon Territory centennial celebrations in those cities. While the central motif for this stamp is yet to be selected, a copy of an outline map of the original Oregon Territory, which comprises the present states of Washington, Idaho, Oregon and portions of Montana and Wyoming, has been recommended to the postmaster general for inclusion.

President Roosevelt is said to favor a Postoffice Department policy calling for at least one series of special stamps a year. He has made particular reference to the success of the national parks series in 1935, and believes the army-navy series will prove equally popular.

Mr. Roosevelt favors a series to honor Americans in such fields as art, literature, science and invention. Such a series of stamps long has been advocated by philatelists, and there is reason to believe that the first stamps of this character may appear next year.

A GOOD START

One day's increase in railroad travel may not be unquestioned proof any more than the presence of one swallow proves the advent of Summer.

Still, it is worth while noting that Eastern railroad officials report substantial increases in travel on the first day on which lowered railroad fares went into effect under order of the Interstate Commerce Commission. One passenger agent reported a 20 per cent increase in coach travel.

What this will mean to the railroads, over a longer period is, of course, to be shown by developments. The promise, however, may be assumed to be good. We hope those officials who have been strong in the belief that decreased rates will not yield a compensating increase in traffic will be disappointed.

Never lend money to a relative. It costs no more and makes you feel nobler to give it to him.

The world is like a school. The smart lads can't go ahead until the dull ones review today's lesson.

ECHOES OF THE PAST

By Courier Staff Member

Review of the news as it appeared in the Bucks County Gazette issue dated at Bristol, Dec. 17, 1874. The Gazette, a weekly newspaper published in Bristol, was discontinued following its merger with the Courier.

On last Saturday a respectable looking man called at Mrs. Thacker's on 14th street, and engaged board. He represented himself to be a machinist, and said that he was employed at Thomas Hughes & Co.'s mill. On Monday morning he arose early, took breakfast and left. Not returning, Mrs. Thacker's suspicions were aroused, and upon searching the room occupied by the stranger found that he had captured a valuable lace shawl.

The America Hose, Hook and Ladder Company purpose building a brick engine house on Pond street, having received the assurance of the Burgess and Council that the ground would be leased them for that purpose. They have purchased a horse carriage from the Bristol Fire Company for $75. The Bristol Fire Company also presented the new company with enough hose to fill the reel.

The Pennsylvania Railroad purpose constructing a new iron bridge near the Mill street crossing. They will make preparations to build as soon as the water is out of the canal.

A. L. Packer, chairman of the Street Committee, contracted with some of the riggers who have been engaged at the water-works to examine the flag staff, and ascertain whether it had decayed at the cross-trees. A ladder was procured from the engine house, and one of the men went up the pole yesterday. He reported the staff perfectly sound and the trestle-trees safe. The key fastening and top mast is partly decayed, and the riggers say that by inserting a new one and placing standing rigging from the rounds to the staples on the main mast, the top mast can be made secure beyond doubt. The main mast is said to be sound at the foot and able to weather the storm for a long time.

The closing exercises of the Bristol high school will be held on Wednesday and Thursday of next week. Wednesday will be devoted to the examination of pupils. On Thursday public exercises will be given, consisting of selected readings, recitations, essays, dialogues, music, etc.

The stand-pipe of the water works was placed in position last Friday, without accident. It is 140 feet high, six feet in diameter and weighs 35,000 pounds. On Saturday, Capt. Jesse Mears, one of the directors, was hoisted to the top, and took a survey of the surrounding country.

The fair for the benefit of the poor, given by the Ladies Aid Society of Bristol, at Masonic Hall, Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings of last week, was a grand success. A feature of the fair was "Rebekah's Well," presided over by two fair young misses, who permitted thirsty wayfarers to quench their thirst at only five cents a glass. The display throughout was very fine and the ladies deserve great credit for the energy and zeal manifested in getting up the fair. The net profits amounted to $275. The following ladies and gentlemen were engaged in attending the tables and assisting at the fair: Lucy Dobie, Minnie Tice, Bertha Hibbs, Lucy Ables, Mattie Taylor, Edith Tice, Lizzie Bailey, Ella Brooks, Ellie Turner, Mamie Goodline, Annie York, Mattie Muncey, Kate Brooks, Annie Worrel, Annie Evans, Annie Bailey, Mattie Montgomery, Clara Heady, John Diviney, Harry York, John Ahnee and William Brelsford.

NEWPORTVILLE—On last Saturday night, Mr. John Brelsford, of Middletown Township, was met by several men who commanded him to stop; he became scared and started to run, and was pursued by them; he stumbled and fell, and several of the pursuers stumbled over his body, and in the excitement, Mr. Brelsford managed to escape over Langhorn's Hill.

Mr. David Harrison, of this place, was badly bitten in the palm of his hand by a hog which he was trying to stick, on last Saturday.

The Neshaminy could be crossed on the ice on last Tuesday.

Mr. William Berry has had a very large and painful abscess in the palm of his hand, which has incapacitated him from working for nearly two months, but is now convalescing. Last week the dogs got among his sheep and killed and threw two of them into the Neshaminy and tore the ears of another.

Mr. Charles Henry, justice of the peace of Bridgewater, fell in the river at Race street wharf, Philadelphia, on Tuesday morning, and was rescued by one of the harbor police.

Edmund Lawrence has sold to William B. Rogers a house on Wood street, near Penn, for $2,000.

HULMEVILLE

Sunday was passed by Wilmar Gregg at the home of his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. William Hoffmeister, Newtown.

The pageant "Ramona," staged at the Longwood Open-Air Theatre, Saturday evening, was witnessed by the Misses Adeline E. Reetz, Mary Thompson and Elma E. Haefner, Hulmeville; and Miss Gertrude Hanson, Bristol.

The Methodist Sunday School Board will conduct its bi-monthly meeting on Tuesday evening at the close of the prayer service. Arrangements will be made at that time for the annual Sunday School picnic.

Mrs. Edward Davis will be hostess to the Hulmeville Woman's Christian Temperance Union, Wednesday evening, at her home.

Gov. Gives Concession To A Personal Friend

In the new lease for the restaurant, which is situated in the basement directly beneath the main rotunda in the main Capitol building, Swope Jr. is named with Carr as one of the lessees. The monthly rental is fixed at $50 with the State furnishing light, power and water. Incidentally workmen from the Department of Property and Supplies, which negotiated the lease, have volunteered their services in making some necessary repairs.

W. J. Hertley, the ousted proprietor, whose zeal for the New Deal was said to have been somewhat lukewarm, filed a mercantile return last year in which he took affidavit to a return naming from $25,000 to $30,000 as the gross volume of business for a year. Under his lease Hertley was forbidden to put in a side line of cigars and cigarettes. No such restriction is contained in the new Swope lease. Under its provision he is allowed such a privilege, despite the fact that immediately adjoining his restaurant Webb Bennett sells cigars and cigarettes. Hardly necessary to point out Bennett is a Republican, hence he will have sharp competition from the New Dealers in the sale of tobacco.

Last December, Hertley, who gained an inkling that the Swope were after the restaurant concession sought protection by a suit in the Dauphin county court. He secured a six months' extension which expired June 1, 1936, when the triumphant friends of Governor Earle moved in. Hertley's lease for a four-year term, was dated June 1, 1933.

The restaurant concession in the Capitol was granted February 12, 1923, by a concurrent resolution of the legislature. Its inception assumed the form of a small stand, on the second floor between the Senate and House chambers, where soft drinks and tobacco were sold. Three years later it was removed to its present location in the basement where it rapidly developed into a well equipped and profitable restaurant business.

CHAPTER XXXIV

Mary's brand new indifference to the heir to the Todd fortune had a new and rather alarming effect on him. Perhaps he was piqued by it. Perhaps he thought it was assumed, and wanted to call her bluff.

He fairly dogged her footsteps now, hung around the cabin. Whistled. Waved. Sent her notes.

Tim Fried, Janet's husband, was unmistakably seeking her out, too. Why did it have to be they, instead of any one of the perfectly good unmarried men?

Certain Fried got no encouragement from her! He looked so much like Milt Holden that it gave her the horrors every time she looked at him. Besides, she hadn't any desire to flirt with a married man!

Jamie . . . well, it was a little different with Jamie. She hadn't any particular desire to flirt with him either, but he had been taken away from her once. She wouldn't have any scruples about it. Vesta had it coming to her—mean little snob!

The were all snobs, even Dr. Crawford, who had talked so much about despising them, and had been so chummy with Mary on the trip when she didn't have anyone else to be chummy with. And now she'd forgotten all about that. Took good care to remind her about her "place."

Old Mr. Todd, Jamie's father, wasn't like the rest, though. He was away, fishing, most of the time, but whenever they met he spoke to her just as he would to any of the others. Not polite and cool, like the guests. Not cool and patronizing like his wife and daughter. Just—nice.

Once there was a special little covered dish on her breakfast tray, and the maid who brought it said that it was trout that Mr. Todd had caught, and he had given orders that "the nice little girl who worked with Dr. Crawford" should have some, too!

She thanked him, shyly, when she met him on the pier next morning. "Oh, you like trout, eh? Then you shall have it every morning. Why don't I see you around with the others in the evenings? Don't you dance, eh?"

Yes, but I—I'm pretty busy—" "Stuff and nonsense. Love you let me see you dancing with the others after this!"

It warmed her heart. Not that she dared accept his invitation without permission from Mrs. Todd, or Dr. Crawford.

She didn't mind—much. After all, she wasn't here on a holiday! She was getting paid for working.

But sitting alone on the little veranda in front of her room in the dark, listening to the laughter and the music, was hard, sometimes. After all, she was young . . . and it's hard to be left out.

Saturday was the hardest. They were having a real party. Lanterns and champagne, and guests from all over the country. Even a country "orchestra" of three grizzled old men who played "fiddle," banjo and trumpet!

She just ached to go. Up to the very last minute she sort of expected that Dr. Crawford would speak of it, or Jamie's mother. Maybe Jamie spoil her chances. He'd been hanging around the cabin all afternoon, teasing his aunt, and showing off.

Dr. Crawford was in fine humor until she said something to him about the party and Jamie said, "Oh yes, the party—that reminds me that I haven't dated up your secretary yet. Don't forget, classmate, that the first dance is mine. You've got to save it for your alma pappy!"

Mary just smiled, and pretended to go right on with her work, but Jamie didn't have sense enough to let it go at that. He said, "Aunt Emilia, will you speak to her? She ignores me!"

And Dr. Crawford said, "My secretary can tell you, Jamie, that I never interfere! I rely absolutely on her own good judgment."

That settled it.

It was as good as an order. She wasn't to go.

It's all right to be philosophical, but when night came, and the lanterns were lit, and she knew that every other girl was adding a last minute dab of powder or rouge while she sat alone like a little old maid, it wasn't so easy. She could hardly hold back the tears. It wouldn't have hurt them to ask her! They might let her have SOME fun!

The guests were beginning to arrive.

Two beautiful speed boats whirled up to the pier, unloaded their cargo of gayly chattering boys and girls.

The "orchestra" began to tune up.

Mary looked down at the plain little pique dress she had worn all day. It would be fun to change just for her own satisfaction. Nobody would know.

She went into the room, opened the closet door. The sheer pink cotton "formal" that she had bought the last minute, thinking it would be just the thing for a party in the woods, was hanging there.

She lifted it out. It was just the thing, all right. Just the sort of thing the other girls were wearing.

Mary Shannon slipped the soft pink ruffles over her head, felt better immediately.

From the petal-like pinkness of the dress, her head emerged, like a rose.

Of course that isn't just the thing to say of oneself, but there certainly wasn't anyone else to say it. Except Jamie, maybe, and Jamie wasn't going to see her tonight.

Early to bed, for lack of anything better to do, wasn't making her particularly wise or wealthy, but it was evidently good for her health. She'd never looked better.

Her skin was just as smooth and fresh and glowing as it used to be in the old days when she lived at home with the folks and Ma made her get eight hours' sleep every night.

Her eyes, that had been heavy and dark-shadowed, were the clearest blue now, and there was no doubt about it, she did have nice brows and lashes. They weren't long, but anyway they were thick and dark.

Too bad there was no one to see her!

She opened her top bureau drawer, took out a piece of narrow French blue satin ribbon . . . that shade of blue is so nice with pink.

Ma used to call it "affected" when she tied a ribbon around her head, but since there was no one to see her, anyway . . .

She tied it carefully, the perky little bow at the top, let her dark hair curl around it.

"Affected," if you felt that way about it, but flatterer! Anyway, there was no one to see her. She was just pleasing herself.

She wished Stephen Bennet could see her. If he thought she was "disturbingly pretty" in plain little office clothes, when she was all worn out with worry over that miserable Holden affair and had dark circles under her eyes and everything else, he'd certainly think so now.

If things had been different, if she'd met him at a place like this—anywhere but in an office, where he was boss and she was stenographer . . .

Well, there's no use starting that "it might have been." It wasn't—and that was that. And here she was, all dressed up and nowhere to go!

It was getting dark now. She could go out and sit on the veranda without being seen.

She arranged her ruffled skirts in the deck chair, settled herself to enjoy the sweetness of the night. She thought, I'm like Cinderella—only I lack the prince to take me to the ball!

The moonlight had turned the lake to silver, and all about her was the velvet blackness of the night.

Hidden shrubs sent up their faint, spicy sweetness, the bobbing lanterns turned the distant lodge to fairyland.

This is really the way to enjoy dance music . . . having it float to you over the water, through the trees. The dancers couldn't hear the lap, lap, lap of the water against the lake-shore as she could.

They couldn't hear the little night noises, the rustling of the trees, the crackling of fallen leaves . . . Oh, what's the use of fooling yourself?

She didn't care a thing about the beauty of the night—she wanted to DANCE!

There wouldn't be any harm in walking down to the pier.

Everyone was over at the lodge, dancing.

Nobody'd see her.

And if Janet's silly husband was looking around for her, as he had threatened, or Jamie should just happen to be taking a walk, she could say that she'd just come down to the lake for a little row.

The pier was a little nearer the music, but that was about the only advantage it had over the cottage.

So lonely . . . how do people enjoy things, alone? Don't they honestly want someone near them? Can they just love beauty for its own sake?

Oh, it was mean of them—MEAN, MEAN, MEAN not to ask her! She wouldn't treat her worst enemy that way . . . and how would she ever stand it, just going on and on, never having any fun? Careers are all right if you like them, but personally she'd rather go to one good dance . . .

Someone was coming. She moved behind a pile.

"I don't mind your making love to Caroline von Hess," Vesta Todd was saying in her unmistakable Vestaish voice—"but her husband does. So please try to control . . . ahem . . . Jamie, dear, is that Janet over there by the boats?"

"I don't give a darn who . . . why, it's Mary! I've been looking all over the cock-eyed plantation for you!"

"Oh, hello, Jamie! Good evening, Mrs. Todd. I—I was just going for a row!"

"It's a lovely night for it, Miss Shannon. Come, Jamie—we must be getting back, dear."

She walked ahead.

Walked ahead, like a jailer, expecting the trusty to follow.

Well, if that was all the spirit Jamie had left . . .

Mary began to untie one of the boats. Perhaps she took a little longer than necessary, fussing over the knots, looking for the right oars.

At last she had them adjusted in the oar-locks.

She didn't care what he did—it was nothing to her—and she despised him already. But Vesta's cocksure attitude . . . Hadn't she heard that husbands were easier to get than to keep? Didn't she realize that Jamie was a man and that a very pretty girl was going rowing alone on the lake?

She stepped into the boat, pushed off from the pier.

"Oh, Mary—wait!"

She grinned.

He'd come back, all right.

Now Mrs. Vesta, what do you think about that?

"Mary," he called again. "Come on back, and have that dance with me!"

She rested on the oars. "No, thanks. I don't feel like dancing. It's too nice a night."

"Then we'll go for a walk. I've got a quart of champagne right here!"

"What a pity I don't drink!"

"Mary, come in closer. I want to talk to you."

"Can't I'm in a hurry."

"Very well. I'll get in another boat and follow you."

Again she grinned in the dark. What a picture that would make!

IT'S EASY TO HAVE A PICK-UP PICNIC FOR FAMILY'S ENJOYMENT

By RHANDEVA A. ARMSTRONG
Home Economics Representative

Picnic time is here again and we ought not to let a week go by without "eating out" at least once. The easy picnics are the kind to have—ones where hours of preparation aren't necessary.

Let's be ready so that if father or the boys come in at five and say "Oh, I wish we could go on a picnic," the answer can be, "Why, let's go for supper."

Perhaps a walk through the back lot will bring us to a small wooded section. If we don't want to go that far there may be just as nice a picnic site under some trees on the lawn. Wherever it is it is the food that really counts, as any one will say. It must be good and there must be lots of it.

If an open fire may be built there are ever-so-many foods to cook out in the open. Families that go on many picnics keep a skillet handy for frying potatoes or meat. One of the best concoctions is to fry some onion and a few slices of bacon, which have been cut in small cubes, and then add already cooked or canned red kidney beans and chili sauce, salt and pepper, and heat. Then just before serving time everyone should toast a piece of bread and pour the mixture on the toast.

Right now the garden can be a source of inspiration for what to take on the pick-up picnic. Crisp radishes and onions never come amiss. Carrots cut in thin strips and crisped in cold water are good to "munch." Asparagus, tomatoes and lettuce may be made into sandwiches or salads.

Don't forget to tuck a jar of home-canned pickles in the picnic basket.

It may be the family prefers dill pickles but pickled caviar apples are easy to eat on a picnic.

For dessert any fruit is delicious and can be prepared in a very short time. Some fruits need no attention until it comes time to eat.

Right now strawberries are in season. All they need is a good washing because the hulls want to be left for "handles" so that the berries may be eaten without spoons. When on a picnic remember the old saying, "Fingers were made before forks." A little powdered sugar in which to dip the berries won't take up much space in the picnic basket.

Mixed fruit cup dessert may be prepared before going on a picnic or after arriving. Cut up and mix together several fruits, such as pineapple and strawberries. If prepared before leaving the house this dessert can be carried in a quart jar. If prepared at the picnic it can be cut right into individual dishes.

Remember to take advantage of the next nice day that comes our way. An impromptu picnic is fun for the whole family.

Mushroom Sauce

One medium sized can of mushrooms, or one-half pound of fresh mushrooms sautéed, four tablespoons fat, three tablespoons flour, one cup top milk or thin cream.

Saute mushrooms in fat, add flour slowly and brown slightly. Add thin cream and cook slowly until it thickens. More seasonings may be added according to personal preference. Pour over steak or chicken.

HARRY GRABER AND RICHARD DONAHUE MATCHED FOR GREAT WIND-UP AT ST. ANN'S ARENA HERE TONIGHT

With one of the best wind-ups ever matched here, the St. Ann's Athletic Association will hold another of its bi-monthly boxing shows tonight in its arena, Wood and Franklin streets, under the sanction of the Middle Atlantic District of the A. A. U. The participants in the wind-up are Harry Graber and Richard Donahue.

Graber, who comes from the East Side Club, has met Donahue twice within the past two weeks, the last victory going to the sorrel-topped East Side youngster. Last Tuesday night at the Philadelphia Arena, Donahue whipped Graber in a close fight. Tonight the lads meet in the "rubber" match with Graber attempting to keep his slate clean in this vicinity as he has lost but two bouts in over a year of fighting in the local ring.

In a bout equally as important as the Graber-Donahue affair, is the Tony Maglione, St. Ann's, and Daniel Murray, Arena, fight. Maglione, who has won seven straight, faces his acid test in Murray. The Arena fighter decisively trimmed Henry Sturges in a one-sided fight last week. In the last show here, Maglione barely eked out a win over Sturges. Murray is the favorite in this fight.

Tony Puccio, the fighting baker-boy, attempts a comeback with Willie Adams, Arena, being his foe. Puccio has fought the best of them in his weight during his youthful amateur record, and is one lad who is not afraid of Johnny Aiello, Wilmington fighter, who cannot secure bouts because of his prowess. Adams, a rugged youth, will make a fine battle with Puccio who has been off because of an infected ear.

Trainer Sammy Moffo yesterday put the okay on Vince Delia and Sylvester Purnell, St. Ann's fighters, who have stiff engagements on their hands. Delia, after being stopped by Tony Surello in his last bout, meets Dennis Bradley, Arena, and Purnell fights Tommy Brown, a colored youth from the East Side Club. Purnell has been away from the squared circle since he injured his ribs in a bout with Walter Padlo.

Tommy Higgins, Arena, who stopped the 11 straight victories streak of Tommy Lamont, East Side, will have an opportunity to show the local fans that he can do it again when the boys meet in the eighth fight of the night. Higgins was the surprise of the boxing show last week when he beat Lamont.

A fight which is expected to have the fans on the edge of their seats from the opening gong will be that affair between Billy Maher, Holland, and Frankie Rice, Arena. This is also a return match as Maher eked out a close win over the Arena warrior several weeks ago.

The opponent for Sammy Cappello, St. Ann's, will be Jimmy Torrie, Arena. Cappello made his debut last show and amused the local fans with his boxing antics. He has improved immensely under the direction of Sammy Moffo and is expected to count in with his first triumph tonight.

Lenny Dever, the Fourth Ward's pride, will have Louis Spino, Arena, as his foe, in what is expected to be a fast fight from the outset. Spino has the experience over Dever but has never shown anything to the local fans, losing all his matches here.

General admission tickets will go on sale at seven o'clock, with the first bout starting at 8:30 o'clock, prompt.

BORDERTOWN EAGLES WIN FIRST HALF OF THE RACE

The Bordertown Eagles copped the first half of the Delaware River Baseball League by winning both of their week-end games. Saturday, the Jersey team nosed out Lambertville, 4-3, and yesterday the West-managed team, outscored Morrisville, 7-5.

Yesterday's triumph came despite the fact that Adam Nowinski, former Morrisville High School star, put his team to the fore by slamming a four-bagger with the sacks loaded. Bordertown won out in the eighth when Charlie Griffiths doubled and Mailey tripled to score him. Mailey scored as Dunfee was being put out.

Hulmeville lost its only game of the week-end to Harry Holsclaw and his Newtown players. Holsclaw in checking in with his fifth straight triumph, held the Hulmevilleites to seven hits. The losing twirler was Wil Holland who settled down after a wobbly start and gave Newtown but a lone tally. The Bruins scored three times in the first.

Dolington gained all the ground in the week-end games, gaining two wins to move into second place, Morrisville dropping to fourth because of a double loss. Dolington made a total of thirty-five hits over the week-end and twenty-six runs. In yesterday's tilt, Griggs and "Butch" DeBoskey made home runs.

HIBERNIANS TO MEET CASEYS

The Hibernians will have a chance to clinch the first-half race of the Bristol Twilight League tonight on Landreth's field when they meet the Caseys, the only team which beat them this season. The Hibs have won 12 and lost one, and have a record of 11 straight triumphs. A triumph for the Hibs will practically assure them of the first-half race. In the other Bristol Twilight League game scheduled, the Excelsior team meets St. Ann's on Leedom's field. St. Ann's must win to keep in the first-half running.

Langhorne Speedway has auto races set for Sunday, June 21.

Win and Lose Games

scored four runs on hits by Hutton and Murphy, a fielder's choice and Praul's wild throw to first base of Ryan's intended sacrifice bunt and Hartman's single to right.

Landreth's brought the game to a close in quick order in the ninth. Ashby's hit to right for two bases and a base on balls to Praul put men on first and second, with none out. Rockhill's two base drive to left counted both runners and tied the score and "Vic" rounded the sacks and came on home with the deciding counter, when Ryan's throw to third—of Cunningham's relay—went wild.

Manager Landreth was compelled to shift his line-up considerable due to the fact several of his players were at work and the return of Rockhill, but the change seemed to be satisfactory. Ashby's catching and hitting was the feature.

The Landreth nine dropped a well-played game to the strong Penn A. C. of Philadelphia yesterday at Landreth Park, 7-4.

The fact that the "Pennacs" are the best team to appear against a local team in a number of years and their record of 23 wins in 25 games played this season, did not deter the "Farmers" and for seven innings the visitors were given the hardest opposition they have encountered this season.

Ashby, pitching for Landreth, performed in excellent fashion, but had one bad inning, the eighth, when an error by one of his teammates unnerved him and he allowed three straight hits and four runs counted. Simon limited the Seeds to eight hits, half of which were for extra bases.
